

```

<head>
<script>
alert( "Please tell your friends about this site");
var myname= prompt("What is your first name?");
alert(myname + " is a cool name :)");
alert("Have you been on this site before " + myname);
var grade= prompt("What grade are you in?");
if (grade > 8) {
    alert("You are too old for this site") ;
} else if (grade < 6) {
    alert("you are too young for this site"); } else {
    confirm(" Lets go to this site");
}
</script>
</head>

```

```

<body Style="background-color : #7CFC00">
<h1 style="text-align:center;color:red">Diamond Chess Training</h1>
<h2 style="text-align:center"> Description</h2>
A great site where you can learn to beat all your friends in chess. ( Provided you don't try to beat The Unbeatable Master )

<h3 style="text-align:center">Quick mate</h3>
This will only work on beginners so do not try it on good chess players. Most of them already know this.The first one is called Scholar's mate.
 White goes E4, Then with the standard opening black goes E5, Bc4. At this point look at your opponent if he/she knows this bring your king side knight out. If he/ does not recognize this go Qh5 then mate with Qf7. (This is in standerd notation if you do not recognize this look it up. It is very important for any chess player to know. Please go to the link below it is a great website for quick and long mates.
Link to chess.com
<h4 style="text-align:center">Long mate</h4>
My favorite begining to any game is to go E4 the if my opponent does E5 go NC3 this opens up the chance to go with Fried Liver Attack or go into a boring slow game.
<h5 style="text-align:center">Fried liver attack</h5>
1. E4 E5 2. Nf3 Nc6 3. Bc4 Nf6 4. Ng5 d5 5. Exd5 Nxd5 6. Nxf7 Kxf7 7. Qf3+. Then this is where most of the different variations begin!

```

